Explorer Yearbook Dedication

Repeatedly called "the man, the myth, the legend" by current and former La Salle students, beloved Brother Edward Sheehy is the receiver of the 2007-2008 Explorer Yearbook dedication. This unique individual has been known to allow students to throw pies at him to raise money, was voted "most likely to get asked to monitor a boys lavatory during a high school prom" in a 1997 Collegian and is apparently well versed in "Pittsburghese", which he learned while working in Pittsburgh. From his well known quotes -"is there anything on anyone's mind today?"- to his random outbursts of songs - to his dedication to La Salle athletics, it's difficult to miss Brother Sheehy as he circles the campus everyday.

And circles the campus, Brother Sheehy certainly does. From teaching 8:00am history classes to bleary eyed college students, to chasing the basketball team up and down the court, Brother Sheehy is easily visible all over the campus, as he bounces from one event to another.

While a dedicated and charismatic member of the History Department, Brother Sheehy is more then just a professor at La Salle. He moderates basketball, and formerly football, acting as a mentor for these students on and off the court. However, Brother Sheehy also supports many events that occur on campus. For example, he offers himself to the Service Trips auction, raking in over $100 for dinner with him. (Yes, Brother Sheehy is THAT entertaining as a dinner companion.)

These are just a few things that Brother Ed has done; however, his work at La Salle and in education are truly legendary, going back many years. Brother received the Robe of the Christian Brothers in 1963 and graduated from La Salle in 1968 as valedictorian (the first Brother to ever do so). After graduating from La Salle, Brother Sheehy left La Salle for a while, making his presence known at high schools all over the mid-Atlantic region. He went to Calvert Hall College High School, where he worked as a history teacher and Dean of Discipline. He then moved to St. John's College High School. Brother Sheehy then switched to the administration side of work, acting as a vice principal at Hudson Catholic High School and principal at Central Catholic High School. During this sojourn, Brother received his doctorate from George Washington University.

Finally, nearly twenty years after graduating, Brother Sheehy returned to his Alma Mater in 1988, taking a position as a history professor. During his long tenure at La Salle, Brother has aided in the Admissions department, served on the Faculty Senate, and received the Lindback Teaching award.

Upon looking back on Brother Sheehy's dedicated career, it is truly easy to see why he earned his nickname as "the man, the myth, the legend". He has devoted his life to La Salle, creating his legend in the minds and hearts of La Salle students, past, present and future.

Every year, the Explorer Yearbook opens with a section that highlights occurrences from La Salle. Each year is marked by different events, making up the history of the school. This year is no exception.

Turning these pages, there is a record of the Phillies' incredible season, an overview of the campus construction, the "kick off" of a new year, and the celebration of La Salle's 145 years. These events and the participants, along with many others and the changing world, "chart the course" to carry La Salle into the future.

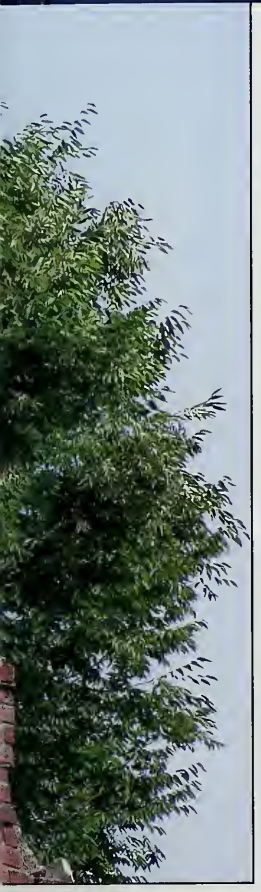
La Salle Reaches New Frontiers



Expanding OUR Borders

At the beginning of the 2007-2008 school year, returning La Salle students and employees noticed some changes all around campus. Some of the modifications to the campus landscape were immediately noticeable, like the absence of Benilde. Other changes were more subtle, such as the addition of benches all over campus, like the ones installed near St. Basil Court.

La Salle began expanding its borders with the addition of Germantown Hospital on May 8, 2007 from the Albert Einstein Health. The Germantown Hospital property added 23 acres to La Salle designated West Campus. Soon after this purchase, plans were put into action to tear down Benilde Hall on Main Campus and move its occupants over to the renovated hospital. University Advancement, University Communications and Alumni Relations all now reside in Germantown Hospital. Other offices formerly located in Benilde moved over to the Administration Building and College Hall.

The highly anticipated Shoppes at La Salle broke ground on October 29, 2007. La Salle grad and Philadelphia State Representative Dwight Evans was on hand at the groundbreaking. "La Salle has been doing a lot of reaching out, in many different ways, and is an economic anchor to this community." He stressed the benefits of the shopping center for the surrounding community as well as La Salle. Among the stores to be installed are: Fresh Grocer supermarket, Starbucks café, T-Mobile, GameStop and America's Best Eyewear.

The Japanese Tea House, located in a quiet, remote area of the campus was also dismantled in late August. The tea ceremonies are being relocated to another undecided area.

Besides these big projects, La Salle also experienced some aesthetic changes to the campus. This includes the addition of benches campus wide, as well as other things.

It is clear that the campus will continue to grow and build, with renovations to the science center, the Explorer's Den and a bridge to connect West Campus to the library still in the works.

Beginning a New Journey

Activity on campus, slow during the hazy days of summer, picked up again during Opening Weekend 2007. It is Opening Weekend every year that truly kicks off the beginning of a new school year at La Salle. Returning students meet up with friends, reciting stories of internships, jobs and beach trips. However, it may be that the Freshmen, the newest members to the La Salle community, that are most effected by Opening Weekend, getting their first taste of college life.

Thursday, August 23 was the beginning of Opening Weekend, when 780 Freshmen students stepped onto campus for the first time as La Salle students. Many, about 88% of these new students, spent the morning meeting roomates and moving into the dorms with assistance from the Football team, RSA, SGA and La Salle Ambassadors. Freshman communters also arrived on campus, testing SEPTA and La Salle parking.

The Opening Weekend Family lunch, held on the Main Quad allowed the newcomers to mingle with fellow classmates, as well as returning students. After Opening Convocation, when the newest class of Lasallians received a warm welcome from the La Salle community, parents left the campus. This led many of the Freshmen to now explore La Salle on their own.

Opportunities arose all weekend for Freshmen to make new connecions with their fellow classmates. Stadium Jam occured on Thursday Night, where good music and food could be found. Bus trips to South Street, Pat's Steaks, Metroplex and King of Prussia Mall gave new students an opportunity to meet other people, yet it also let them become acclimated to Philadelphia andthe surrounding area. And Explorer Games was a chance to show off athletic abilities and have a good time in McCarthy Stadium.

The weekend turned out to be fun for all involved. "I thought opening weekend was a lot of fun, and it was good to spend time with my roommate, however, the activities should all be in the gym... where there is A/C," said Christine McCullough, 2011.

Welcome Class of 2011

Celebrating the Phillies' Playoff Hunt

Showing Phillies Pride

It was a grim start for the Philadelphia "Phightin" Phils, with a 1-6 beginning to the 2007 season. The Phillies struggled during April and May, having lost more games then they had won in both months. Was shortstop Jimmy Rollins' comment on February 20, 2007, "we're the team to beat", doomed to haunt the Phils all season?

After the slow start, the Phillies began to pick up the pace. However, injuries marred the season, slowing the Phillies' climb. During the season, the Phillies had to play without the skills of: Ryan Howard, Brett Myers, Tom "Flash" Gordon among many others. Perhaps, the biggest scares for the persistent Phils came when beloved, second baseman Chase Utley and ace pitcher, Cole Hamels went on the DL.

Despite the deluge of injuries, the Phils continued to slowly gain ground on the Mets, leaders of the NL East. The month of September was a turning point, as the Phillies continued winning key games, including sweeping the Mets. At the same time the Phils were executing this onslaught, the reigning Mets self-destructed, allowing the Phillies to win the NL East title in the final games of the season. This put the Phillies into the playoffs for the first time since 1993.

With the Phillies in the playoffs, the city went nuts. Everyone was celebrating the victory of the "come back kids" as the Phils were being nicknamed.

La Salle was no exception. Phillies t-shirts were donned as students joined in the triumph of the Phillies. One could not walk into Olney Hall without seeing Phillies gear.

As the playoffs began, the University showed the games in the Dan Rodden theater, allowing students to gather together to cheer on the Phils or bite their nails. Free pretzels were given out in support of the Phillies.

The glory ended as the Phillies were swept in 3 games by the red hot Colorado Rockies. Yet, many were not disappointed. In fact, they were proud of the Phils, coming back against the odds. All in all, it was an exciting season, with the Philadelphia motto ringing in our ears, "There's always next year."

Thanksgiving For the Officers

With sternos burning and spoons and forks in hand, the La Salle Ambassadors served Thanksgiving Dinner to the police of the 35th District Police. For the past eight years, the Ambassadors, a student group working out of the Advancement Office, along with the help of members of the community and other student groups, have been serving the delicious meal including turkey, ham, stuffing, cranberry sauce, vegetable, mashed potatoes, candied yams and the rest of our favorite Thanksgiving foods. It is a time to thank the police officers for the support they have shown in keeping the La Salle community as safe as possible.

But there was something different and bittersweet about this Thanksgiving Dinner. Just a few shorts weeks before dinner was to be served, Officer Chuck Cassidy was killed in the line of duty. A member of the 35th District himself, Cassidy sometimes helped patrol La Salle's campus. A display dedicated to Cassidy -his portrait, clad in blue with a strong stare- was surrounded by flowers and cards sent to him from local school children. It was in light of Cassidy's death that the La Salle Ambassadors decided that any amount of money raised over the cost of food would be donated directly to the Cassidy Fund. Business Affairs set up a table in the Union Building for fundraising to go straight to the Cassidy Fund in conjunction with the money the Ambassadors raised.

As the Ambassadors served dinner to the hungry police officers, a check for $3,500.00 was presented to Captain McCluskey, on behalf of Cassidy's family. Also presented was a picture of Cassidy being served Thanksgiving Dinner by one of our Ambassadors last year. Both the check and picture were given to Cassidy's family later that day when they held their first press conference in the station.

This is the La Salle I know and love where the entire community comes together in time of pain and need. It is a humbling experience to help serve dinner to a group of individuals who put their lives on the line for each of us each day. The Ambassadors will continue this tradition as long as there is a Thanksgiving to celebrate. We welcome support from every member of the La Salle community in the future and thank you for the support in the past.

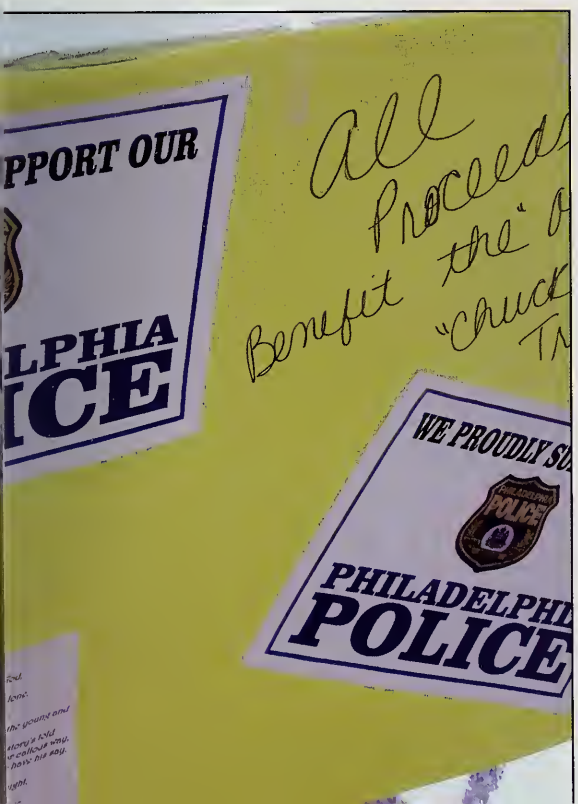
Bittersweet Celebration



"145 Years and counting..."

Happy Birthday La Salle

In 1863, the Christian Brothers, after setting up the successful Christian Brothers' High School, were asked by Bishop (later Archbishop) Wood of Philadelphia to set up La Salle College. After receiving approval from the archdiocese of Philadelphia and the state of Pennsylvania, the Charter was put into writing. Right in the middle of the Civil War, March 20, 1963, the Charter was signed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives of PA, the President of the Senate of PA and the Governor of PA, effectively recognizing and accrediting La Salle College. "The La Salle Charter IS the birth certificate for La Salle College (now University)," said Bro. Joseph Grabenstein of the Archives.

Charter week 2008 was a big celebration, as the school celebrated its 145th year. The week was packed with events honoring faculty, presentations given about La Salle, ethics forums given by the school of business, Basket Bidding for service trips and the ever popular Charter Dinner.

Perhaps the most informative part of the week was a presentation offered by the Division of Student Affairs. The presentation, "Learning La Salle", offered some key insights about La Salle as addressed by the students.
The presentation introduced to the university the results of student surveys about alcohol, substance abuse, health, as well as students' feelings about services offered by the university.

The university also recognized achievements of faculty members, as well as remembered a very special Christian Brother. The 2nd annual Brother Scubillion Award for Justice was awarded on Tuesday, March 18. Dr. David Culp, Assistant Professor of Business Law, was this year's recipient of the award.

One of the most favored events for students during Charter Week is the Charter Dinner, held on Wednesday, March 19 this year. The Charter dinner included some outstanding foods, like chocolate strawberries, crème brûlée and various carving stations. Making the food even better were the servers. At different times that night, one could find Bro. Ed Sheehy, Bro. Michael McGinniss, Dr. Bonni Zeiteck and Dr. Cicala, among many others, all serving food to hungry Lasallians.

La Salle Art Exhibition

Creativity excels at La Salle. Throughout a semester, there are various ways that Lasallians can show off their creative skills: clubs, activities, events like the Charlie Awards. However, a collaborative effort exists that allows for faculty, students and staff to show their creativity in one exhibition.

This year marked the second annual La Salle University Student, Staff and Faculty Art Exhibition. Members of the La Salle community from all three of these groups entered artwork to the art museum staff for judging. Pieces entered included paintings, sculptures and photographs.

After the artwork was submitted, all of it was put on display in the La Salle Art Museum in Olney Hall for the entire campus to view. The artwork was held on exhibit from the end of March to the beginning of April.

At the end of the art exhibit, prizes were awarded to the faculty and students with the best pieces. The awards were given out to the winners on April 1. The awards were divided into faculty/staff and student categories.

The award for excellence went to John Kovach in the faculty/staff category for his innovative piece, Vortex, designed from aluminum and copper. The student award for excellence was awarded to Tesla Thomas for her photograph, Confusion of Light. Honorable mention for the faculty/staff category was awarded to Dr. Lynn Collins for her digital art piece, Between Sets, New Orleans. Meanwhile, on the student side, the honorable mention was given to Melanie Charles for her oil piece, Still Life.

At the close of the awards ceremony in the Olney Lobby, students from Jim Williams's art class sketched live models. In a brief talk before the sketching began, Professor Williams was quick to point out, live models usually refers to nude models, however, these models were definitely not nude. The models were merely other students from his art class. The artists' demonstration marked a fitting end to an excellent showcase.

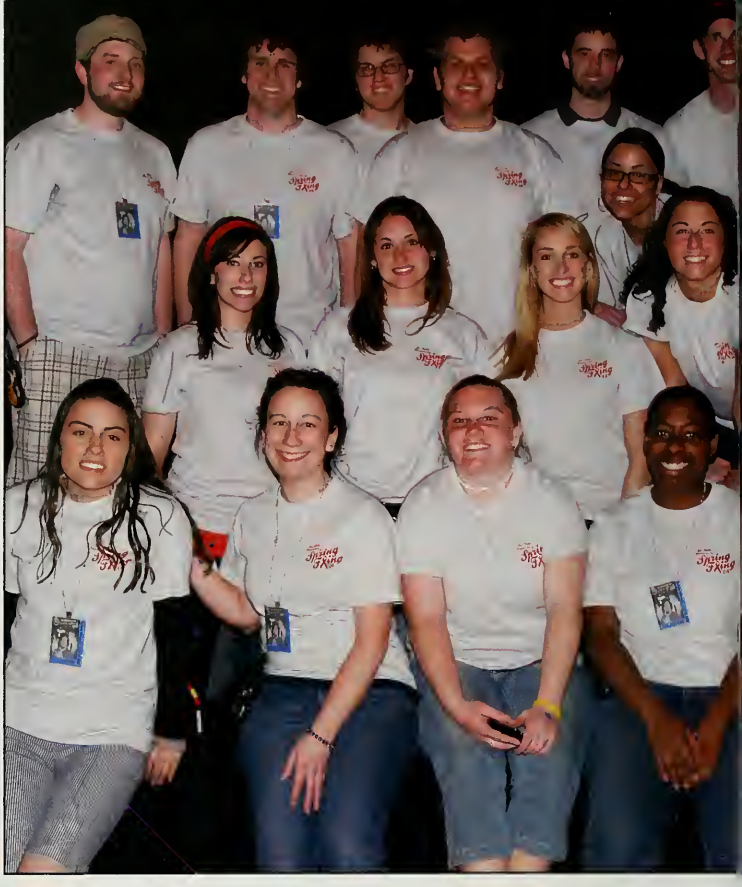
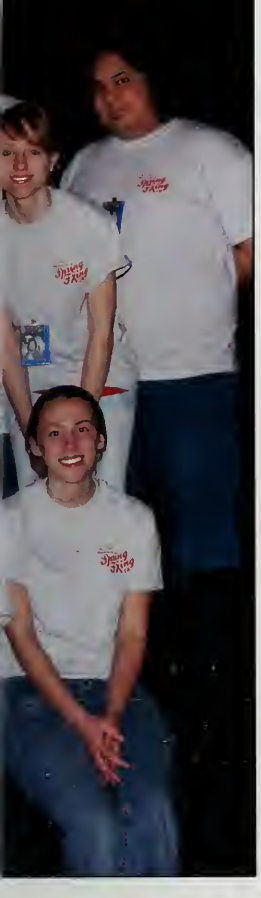
Creativity Abounds

"Uniting for a cause..."





Spring Fling Weekend

Spring Fling 2008 was the climax of student programming this year. It exemplified the product of student organizations working together, and created a festival that will be talked about for years to come.

Organizations such as the Resident Student Association, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Gamma Phi Beta and Circle K worked diligently with Late Night La Salle and the Student Programming Center within the Division of Student Affairs to diversify the events of the weekend to appeal to the largest audience. With this collaboration among students and staff, Spring Fling was set to be an incredible weekend, full of fun and diverse activities for students.

Spring Fling weekend, which was held April 10-12, kicked off Thursday night with a comedy showcase. La Salle had the privilege of being one of the stops on Comedy Central's "Indecision Tour" featuring headliner Colin Quinn with Dan Boulger and James Adomian. The night turned out to be a great way for students to relax and laugh with the end of the semester stress on the horizon.

On Friday Night, students rocked out to the musical rendezvous of Irish rock band, Blackthorn. This eclectic group led the enthusiastic crowd with a mix of original Irish reels as along with traditional rock and roll.

The weekend drew to a close on Saturday night with a dinner and dance party featuring DeeJay 007.

While the weekend was fun for students, staff and all involved, it also helped benefit those in need. All of the proceeds that were raised throughout the weekend from the comedy show and concert show tickets sales, t-shirt sales and dinner sales, went to YouthAIDS. A total of $1,500 was raised.

Altogether, over 1000 students participated in the events of Spring Fling making it a complete success and a job well done.

A Race To the Finish

While the Presidential candidates from the Republican and Democratic parties are not formally chosen until the conventions, the primaries give the nation a fairly good idea of who these nominations might be.

The Presidential race of 2008 started out with numerous candidates on both sides. As the months rolled by, candidates slowly dropped out of the race. Over time, the party front-runners became defined: Senators John Edwards, Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama for the Democratic Party, and Mitt Romney, Mike Huckabee and John McCain led the Republican party.

As the early primaries began, and famous Super Tuesday passed, the list of candidates whittled down even more. Finally, a candidate for the Republican party was clearly in the lead with Senator John McCain. However, it was clear the primary races were far from over.

The Democratic race was not as easily determined. Close races between Edwards, Clinton and Obama kept the Democratic party up for grabs. Finally, after taking third place in the beginning primaries, John Edwards left the race, leaving Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama.

As the primaries continued, Clinton and Obama exchanged wins, continuing in a dead heat. Neither candidate commanded a large enough lead. For this reason, all eyes turned to Pennsylvania as its Democratic primary drew closer in April.

Both Obama and Clinton invaded Pennsylvania, trying to pull off a victory in PA. La Salle, with its large number of eligible voters, was swarmed with Clinton and Obama supporters.

Rock the Vote, held the Saturday before the primary, saw Clinton's daughter, Chelsea, visit the campus and address students gathered at St. Neumann. Students also debated at Rock the Vote in support of either candidate. The La Salle chapter of Students for Obama worked hard to help the Obama campaign, attending his speech at City Hall. This group of students also worked on primary day, encouraging students to vote for Obama all around campus.

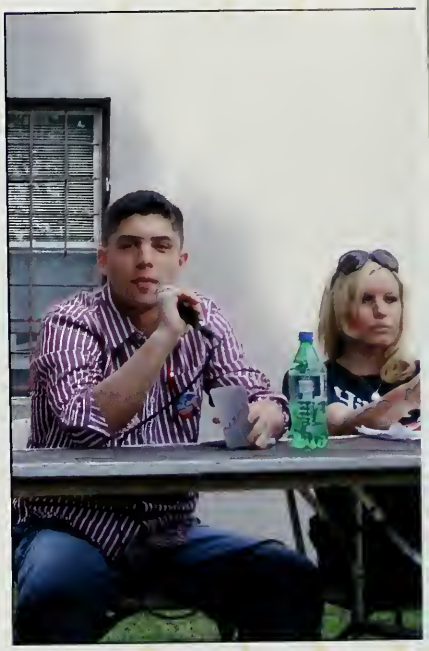
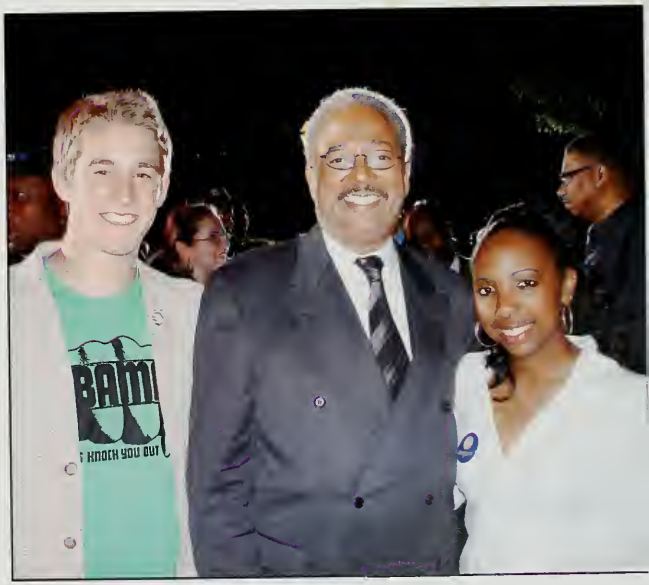
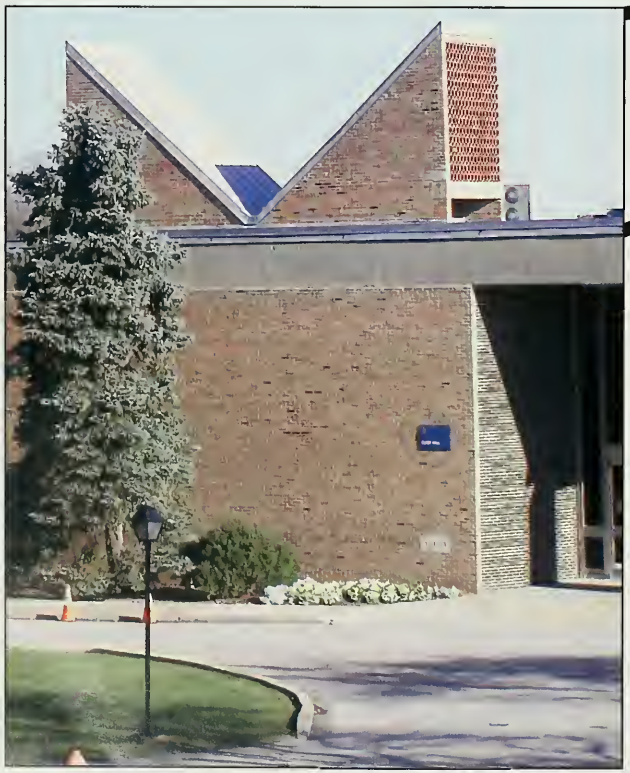
Primary fever hits La Salle







Academics lie at the heart of La Salle University. With classes led by devoted faculty, students are introduced to a variety of subjects designed to help them succeed in any field. Whether an English or Biochemistry major, students are sure to get the best education possible.

The Academics section is devoted to describing each and every department that exists at La Salle. Dividing up the section are the three schools present at La Salle: the School of Arts and Sciences, the School of Business and the School of Nursing and Health Sciences.

Whatever the department, Academics chart the educational course of a student, from freshman to senior year.

Office of the President

As President of La Salle, working out of the Peale House, Brother Michael McGinniss is easily found at events all over the campus. A visible figure to the community, Brother McGinniss has many responsibilities that come under his jurisdiction, to keep La Salle running smoothly.

Before becoming President, Brother McGinniss both taught and attended La Salle."When I graduated in 1970, it never occurred to me that I would return as President", said McGinniss.

The 2007-2008 school year marked Brother McGinniss' ninth year as President.

Part of Brother McGinniss' job includes meeting with people all over the city and the nation, including politicians, always acting as a spokesman for the University. "I really am the ultimate spokesperson for La Salle." While traveling, McGinniss always extols the virtues of La Salle

On campus, nothing gets past Brother McGinniss. He oversees all aspects of La Salle, with help from his President's Team, who help keep him informed of the goings-on of La Salle. Everything from campus expansion to academics to athletics comes under his watchful eye.

Brother McGinniss hopes to see La Salle continue to move forward and grow. "I believe that I know the direction that we need to go to better suit the need of students."

Jen McShane, '10

Office of the Provost

The Provost oversees many departments and responsibilities at La Salle, however, many students may not realize that the successful Diplomat in Residence Program (DRP) also comes under the Provost's care.

Director of the DRP, Dr. Cornelia Tsakiridou of the Philosophy department, received her Ph.D. from Georgetown University. While there, she was impressed by the emphasis that the school put on international studies. Thinking La Salle could benefit in this area as well, she founded the program in 1994. Tsakiridou commented that the Christian Brothers are an international order and "a program such as the DRP was both appropriate and in the spirit of the Brothers' mission."

The visitors that come to La Salle are DRP's way of bringing international awareness to the University. Since the program started, over 150 foreign and U.S. diplomats have visited the University. The visitors that come to the school are decided by a combination of the DRP program participants, as well as faculty members. Dr. Tsakiridou tries to supply topics that are relevant to events happening now. "Our topics are timely, reflecting current affairs and significant events in world history."

In the fall of 2007, DRP brought back the popular Tibetan monks from Drepung Gomang Monastery, as well as Marthe Cohn, a former French Jewish spy in Nazi Germany during WWII.

Office of Business Affairs and Office of Enrollment

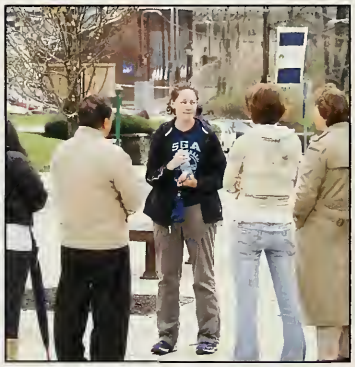
John Dolan is the newest member to join the dedicated administration personnel at La Salle. He joined the adminstration on October 15, 2007 as Vice President for Enrollment Services.

Dolan came to La Salle from the University of Denver, a private university. There, he served as Vice Chancellor for Enrollment. Combined, Dolan has been in the Enrollment business for 25 years, loving every minute of it.

Coming from Denver, it took Dolan some time to settle his family into the Philadelphia area. While finalizing the move, Dolan actually lived with the Christian Brothers on campus. He said that he learned the "in and outs of La Salle" from them. Dolan's biggest responsibility here is to set down the policy and profile for incoming students. He looks for the right student for La Salle. "Its not about the first to apply or alphabetical order but who fits at La Salle," said Dolan. He also wants to right size the enrollment here, as the campus continues to grow and expand. "We are really on the move. I mean, hey we got Gamestop (referring to Shoppes at La Salle). If I want Guitar Hero 3, its right there." Dolan admits to being very good at this game.

To many, Dolan has a vivacious personality to him that will certainly help him in enrollment, as well as a love for the job. "Its been alot of fun, I can't wait to see what comes next at La Salle."

Jen McShane, '10



Office of Athletics and Office of Advancement

La Salle has a large quantity of dedicated athletic teams. However, another program of teams exists, allowing students to be athletically involved while on campus. That program is the Intramural sports program.

The sports offered through Intramurals are flag football (spring and fall), basketball, softball, volleyball, water polo, dodgeball and ultimate Frisbee. "Some students play these sports in high school at varsity level, but cannot for various reasons at La Salle. Intramurals allow these to still compete," said Robert McIntosh, director of the Intramural program. McIntosh explained this as the reason that La Salle has an Intramural program.

There are three different leagues available for students to participate in within the different sports: men's, women's and coed. High numbers of students participate in all the leagues and sports.

Because of the tight schedules of students, there are no formal practices for the various sports. Students just show up and play. "They get to come out and have fun," said McIntosh.

The best teams in a league can move on to compete in City 6 events: competitions among the other city colleges. Some La Salle teams in the past years have won City 6 events; flag football has won once, volleyball has won a total of four times and softball has won three times. Jen McShane, '10

Many aspects of student life come under the Division of Student Affairs. This dedicated group of administrators, led by the devoted and enthusiastic Dr. Joseph Cicala, work extremely hard to help keep a student's journey through La Salle on the right course.

One of the many administrators, and devoted personnel under the Division of Student Affairs is Dr. Lane Neubauer. Dr. Neubauer serves as Associate Dean of Students for Counseling and Health Services. She previously served as the director of the Counseling Center, as well as advised the PEERS organization.

As Associate Dean of Students, Dr. Neubauer oversees Health Services, the Counseling Center as well as Career Service. The combination of the three services, new to the 2008 school year, was done in the hopes to get more collaboration between the three. One collaboration of these three services is the new Explorer U program, where students can discover more about themselves, career opportunities or majors.

All of the services under Dr. Neubauer's care have programs to help students in various ways: Career Services offers the Career Expo, Explorer U and Health Services runs the Health Fair while the counseling center manages the Alcohol Education program."All of the services we offer are positive and strength building,"said Neubauer.

School of Arts and Sciences

There was an air of fantasy which surrounded Dr. Michael Kerlin. Reputation preceded him, and it was always anticipatory. Dr. Kerlin represented one of La Salle's greatest treasures; a grand confluence of all that is good in the realms of academia, professorship and humanity. In this one man was contained such a caring and expressive heart. Upon this body rested a head containing a most humble and genius mind-not to mention a set of "dreamy" blue eyes.

To list Dr. Kerlin's collection of degrees from various universities of the world would be in contradiction of his welcoming, unpretentious demeanor. In the classroom, he was another member of the discussion, always contemplating our ideas. This simple act of listening generated the feeling that if such a well-learned man digested our thoughts, then our musings became more than mere class-time banter. Dr. Kerlin was a maker of legitimate philosophers, and the beauty became that we all could lay claim to such a title.

While Dr. Kerlin's presence will be sorely missed, his spirit-this empowering essence of the classroom-must never depart, not only from the heights of Wister Hall but across our campus. The legacy of Dr. Michael Kerlin is best preserved not through plaque or pomp, but through the compassion with which we embrace new scholarly thought, and perhaps a good frozen yogurt.

American Studies

Charting a New Route

American Studies is one of the newer majors on campus, as well as one of the fastest growing, as well. This interdisciplinary major is headed up by Dr. Francis Ryan and is taught by numerous other professors on campus. While most students in this discipline choose to combine it with their studies of Elementary and Special Education, others choose to use it as a stand alone major or as a minor that can supplement their studies of many other majors on campus.

Each student in the major is required to take three American Studies courses, including the Introductory Course, Themes in American Culture, and the Capstone Seminar. Recently, a variety of new topics of study were added, inclusing, Disney, the American City, Bob Dylan and the 1960's, and Food and Drink in America. Along with these courses, American Studies students take courses in several other disciplines, such as History, Literature, Music, Art History, and Philosophy to round out their studies of the nation.

Those who major or minor in American Studies have a plethora of occupational opportunities at hand when they graduate, including law, journalism, politics, and education.

Art History

An Interesting Direction

In my first Art History class at La Salle, I expected to walk in, sit down, have the lights turned out and somewhere between spurts of dozing off in the darkness, learn something about the famous art on the slides in front of me. However, it was nothing like what I had imagined it to be. Instead, it was an extremely interactive, lively and informative classroom experience. So interesting, in fact, that eight months and one more art class later, Art History became my major.

Many often question the career options presented with an Art History degree. However, the extremely informative Fine Arts department takes painstaking efforts to let any potential Art History major know that their options are plentiful. Not only can you work as a museum curator or Art History professor, but the door is open for careers in advertising, publishing, law and even the medical field. The visual, historical, social, formal and personal analysis needed to study any painting, sculpture or piece of architecture can be applied to nearly any career path.

In conjunction with another major, Art History can be even more marketable. Common complements to the degree are communication, business, English, a foreign language, or the sciences.

Although it is difficult to determine where an Art History degree from La Salle may take you, you can be sure that it will give you endless options.

Biology

Direction to Success

The Biology Department at La Salle University certainly lives up to its mission, which parallels the University's mission espoused by St. John Baptist de la Salle. The professors in this department are wonderful to say the least. By putting a large emphasis on laboratory work, research, and hands-on learning, the professors can assure that each and every student develops the skills necessary to move on to a successful career. The demanding yet supportive academic environment of the biology department has lead to the success of many Biology graduates. La Salle's Biology alumni are doing almost everything, as they've become biological researchers, teachers, marine biologists, geneticists, environmental professionals, botanists, zoologists, doctors, dentists, veterinarians, pharmaceutical salespeople, lawyers, and even artists. In this department, the passion that every professor has for the subject is passed along to the students. Furthermore, each student is treated as an individual and with a great deal of respect. The biology professors not only know you as a student, they know you as a person.

Chemistry/Biochemistry

Essential Exploration

Chemistry is essential to life. From the plastics in water bottles to the ink and paper this book is printed on, chemistry is a part of everything. Chemists are synthesizing tomorrow's medicines. Chemists are expanding the field of nano-technology. Chemists search for ways to improve the quality of life and solve many of the Earth's problems. Chemistry and biochemistry students at La Salle learn the fundamentals to explore chemistry and produce new ideas and products.

Students get hands-on experience in chemistry labs, that reinforce the concepts learned in the lecture of each course. Students gain experience in using state-of-the-art equipment, including gas-chromatograph mass spectrometry, nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy, and infrared spectroscopy. La Salle's small class size allows each student to actually work with these instruments, instead of sending samples to technicians, as occurs at larger universities.

La Salle's small size also facilitates student-faculty interactions. Professors are almost always available for consultation, whether for class materials or just to talk. La Salle chemistry professors are always caring and willing to help, going out of their way to help students understand.

The Chemistry and Biochemistry program also prepares students for careers in forensic science and medicine.

Communication

Journey to South Campus

Students make the daily hike to what sometimes feels like the outskirts of campus to reach their destination of the Comm. Center. Besides Communication majors, most students probably have not stepped into the building, which was renovated from St. Basil's Orphanage elementary school to a high-tech Communication Center in the 1980's.

In 2007, the department received a makeover in many different ways. The new curriculum is fully in swing, with new courses available like Communication Management and Development, Community Journalism and Communication Law. The class of 2009 will be the last class to graduate with the old curriculum.

Also, upgraded paint and new plasma TV's cling to the walls of the classrooms and lounge. The television studio, once the elementary school cafeteria, contains five new Hitachi cameras and three color teleprompters to help the aspiring anchors at La Salle 56.

The Communication department houses many creative individuals who are looking for careers in Communication Management, Journalism, Mass Communication and Public Relations. With the new classes, appearance and equipment, Communication students should never complain about the long trek to south campus anymore.

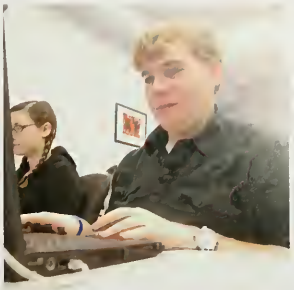
Computer Science

Processing the Future



Computers and technology are constantly upgrading and changing. In an age where computers impact many aspects of life, it can be difficult to adapt to these changes in computers and technology.

The computer science program at La Salle offers students the tools and knowledge necessary to keep up with the changes in technology. Computer science focuses on teaching about the technology, hardware and software of computers. Students learn about the software by taking courses on the various types, as well as using the applications. They study the actual hardware that makes up the computer. Some courses focus on the graphics, while others look at the different operating systems. All of the courses that a computer science major take eventually make the student well rounded in computers.

Majoring in computer science offers graduating students a variety of career paths, as well as graduate school programs. Careers available for the computer science major including: network engineering, underwriter, professor, senior technical consultant, internet specialist, database consultant, controller and graphic artist.

Whatever the computer issue, computer science majors are sure to have an answer.

Criminal Justice

A Map to Experience

In the past four years, the Criminal Justice Program at La Salle University has gone through a major transformation. In the fall of 2005, the program initiated a new curriculum plan that would prepare students not only to enter the field on a local, state, or federal level, but would also allow the opportunity for students who seek other options, such as graduate or law school, to be competitive applicants. Furthermore, the re-development of the program is evident in the diversity of the expertise of its faculty members including: Criminologists, Sociologists, Statisticians, Federal Probation Officers, Sex Offender Counselors, Detectives, Investigators, and Lawyers to name a few. The real world experience that is brought to the classroom is uncanny, and the research that the faculty participates in is ground breaking. With our society constantly changing, especially as far as crime trends and justice issues, the CRJ program rises to the occasion by supplying a plethora of classes from policing to its procedures, courts to corrections, terrorism to international crime, criminology, victimology, gender and crime issues, white collar crime, ethics and law, etc. Criminal Justice majors are challenged to learn about the world in which they live from a criminological perspective, giving them the foundation needed to become the next great leaders of our society.

D'Art

Designing the Course

Many people ask what the Digital Art and Multimedia Design program is, but it seems to be wiser to describe what D'Art is not, and Professor Sandra Camomile put it best: "We're not just graphic design." To that extent, we're not just web design, either, nor are we just programmers or just photographers or just musicians.

The Digital Art and Multimedia Design major provides those entering the field to be digital polymaths, becoming well-rounded in not only artistic graphic design, but the technical aspects of modern technology, such as web coding, database design, musical composition and much more.

Combined with state-of-the-art facilities, an amazing faculty and the creative drive of fellow students, a D'Art major is equipped to take on the world. From web design to video game development; from laying out newspapers to fashion shoots across the world, a Digital Arts degree from La Salle University opens doors and lets creative students fulfill their artistic visions.

A very exciting event happened for the department this year. The University hosted the annual International Digital Media and Arts Association Conference in November. Several students had their art work displayed at the F.U.E.L. gallery in Center City.

Economics

The Trail Begins Here

Economics 150 is part of the Core for students to complete. Often, in this class, professors end up teaching a mix of students whose knowledge of economic situations varies. A mix of different majors participate in the class from business majors, to communication majors, to biology majors and art history majors.

For this reason, Economics 150 ends up being a very basic and introductory level economics class. However, this does not mean that the class is easy or simple. In fact, that is far from true. Studying economics, even at an introductory level, is very in-depth and intense. In this class, students learn the basics of economics, that helps to make them make better spending choices in the future. From the ever-popular supply and demand, to money supply and the Federal Reserves, it is clear that this Core class is full of useful knowledge to help students later in life and in the job market.

Making this class even more beneficial are the professors teaching it. Professors like Dr. Robison, department chair, teach the class. These professors offer real-world experience, making the class easier to understand. Plus, it is always interesting and entertaining to hear these intelligent professors comment on how they would handle economic issues, as compared to the government.

Economics & International Studies

A Global Curriculum

Upon entering the Economics department, most students notice the stacks of papers, books, and news-papers that seem to consume every inch of desk, floor, and shelf space. But ask an Economics major the feeling that strikes them upon entering the Econ. department, and you'll hear words like "devotion," "friendliness," "caring," and "wise".

Economics students at La Salle know that the department cannot be contained by Olney's office walls, for Economics transcends through every department and every field of study. The Economics and International Studies major (ECI) strives further to grab the world and sandwich it between the pages of the latest "Economic Principles" text. Thus, ECI strives to not only apply Economic theory to what we see in America, but also open our eyes to what the rest of the world has been trying to show us.

ECI accomplishes this mission in many ways. The curriculum of the ECI major has been altered from the standard Economics curriculum. For instance, in place of electives, ECI majors must take two courses in international history, two courses in international business, humanities, or social science, and three courses in a foreign language. Moreover, the senior seminar must be completed in both English and a second language. This globally crafted curriculum manifests classroom-bred principles in a global spectrum of the world's many cultures, heritages, and political structures.

Education

The Graduate Path

There are two classes that are essential to completing a masters degree in Education.

EDC 501, a survey of fascinating learning theories, is taught by a gifted teacher. Dr. Liang knows how to get her students motivated more than any professor that I have had a chance to study with before. I always felt elated in her class and thus all challenging assignments became breezes rather than burdens. We spent a great deal of time in class and at home discovering and comparing different theories. We studied great names like Pavlov, Piaget, Vygotsky, Bandura, and Weiner. We also learned how to get the best pieces of each theory to work for our teaching career. With her instructions, we balanced our time working by ourselves and with peers, so as to apply what we learned from readings, lectures, and discussions, to real-life teaching tasks.

EDC 502 approaches social and emotional health of human beings. It is a great course for those who really want to understand what we are like and how we grow physically, psychologically, and mentally. The class teaches how psychological research has contributed to teaching and learning activities and vice versa. This class scans almost all significant aspects of human nature and development and is composed of many interesting and beneficial readings and in-class discussions.

Environmental Science

Rising Awareness

There is no doubt that environmental awareness has risen in the past few years, especially with growing concerns about global warming and pollution. It has become increasingly necessary for students to have some understanding of the environment and our place in it, whether we choose to study it or not. Nature is not just for our enjoyment; rather, we are an integral part of nature.

La Salle's Environmental Science major offers balanced insight from different perspectives into the study of the environment. Chemistry, biology, geology, and science in general are all incorporated into environmental science studies. There is extra emphasis on geology, due to the growing demand by the industry for employees who have a basic understanding of the geologic processes that shape the environment. Every Environmental Science major is required to choose a particular concentration in biology, chemistry, or geology. Environmental Science is more than textbooks and lab work. Students are encouraged to learn from a hands-on approach with numerous field trips.

Environmental Science is a rapidly expanding field with applications to many other studies such as economics, politics, philosophy, and business. There are many facets to explore in the science, and many that have yet to be discovered and understood.

Foreign Languages & Literatures

A Cultural Expedition

Every La Salle student knows a Core Curriculum requirement for graduation is to complete two classes (one if the student is a Nursing major) in a fine art or a foreign language. What some students may not know is just how many languages are offered at La Salle or anything about the Foreign Languages and Literatures department.

La Salle offers majors in the Classics (Latin and Greek), French, German, Italian, Russian and Spanish. Minors are also offered in these languages, as well as in Japanese. Any student majoring in one of these languages, must also take four classes in another language. So, essentially, these students will be fluent in two foreign languages when they graduate. Career opportunities are greater when an applicant can speak another language, La Salle grads can be ahead of the pack.

As with many majors at La Salle, the chance for learning is not capped in the classroom. Many other opportunities for growth exist. For instance, there are many extra curricular student organizations that one may join. There is the Italian Club, Central Eastern European Society, and Organization of Latino-American Students, just to name a few. These groups create and participate in cultural events on campus, bring in lecturers, and take off-campus trips to learn more about language and culture, and to just have fun.

Geology

Discovery in the Field

In grade school we took class trips to the candy factory and the zoo. In high school, trips to museums for culture and amusement parks for physics experiments were highlights. Rarely, in college, do our classes allow for fun field trips. Sure, it's a requirement for FYO to go out and experience Philly, but what major takes you out at least twice a semester? Geology, thats what.

From Dr. Bart's introductory Field Studies class, which is popular even among non-majors, to upper level Metamorphic Petrology, almost every class guarantees some real life learning out of the class room. Memorable trips include, the trash to steam plant for Field Studies, the Avalon, NJ beach trip for Sedimentology, the Acid Mine Drainage site visited for Geo. Chem., and the overnight trip with Professors Natalie Flynn and Dr. Alice Hoersch.

In addition to these trips, the geology lab and lounge are frequently populated by students late at night and sometimes in the early morning studying for lab tests, crunching data on the computer, cutting rock into thin sections, and running individual research experiments.

The camaraderie built by the Geology majors during these long day trips and late nights studying can be matched by few other departments, but will remain hidden from the rest of campus in the basement of Holroyd, at least until the new science center is built.

History

Ideas to be Explored

Due to the popularity of Nursing, Business Management, and Communications, the History department tends to get overlooked. The quality of the program and the helpfulness of the professors, however, are amazing. The program offers three concentrations: American, European, and Non-Western. This allows specialization in one area, while providing freedom to choose which courses one would prefer to take. From Dr. Leibiger's American Revolution course to Dr. Allen's Russian history class, the history program provides the opportunity to learn a variety of interesting topics.

There is always a history class that a student of any major can relate to, no matter what period or location is being discussed. History majors, in particular, develop a much better sense of how individuals and events can completely change the world order and bring about a new era. They learn how to use both primary and secondary sources, and to question existing beliefs or ideas that are often assumed to be fact. La Salle's B.A. in history is incredibly useful for future jobs, and is a flexible degree that allows students to choose their own career, rather than constricting them to a short list of possible jobs. Whether you plan to teach, work in a library or archives, or become involved in politics or law, the study of history offers valuable and exciting ideas that are meant to be explored.

Information Technology

A Network of Paths

Many students often ask, "What is the difference between Computer Science and Information Technology?" Both majors, along with Mathematics are apart of the same department. The major is also closely related to the D'Art program/major. So what is the difference and why choose the IT degree?

Computer Science is all about computer technology, hardware, and software. It can almost be described as a bit more tangible than Information Technology, whereas all computers must have hardware and software to make programs run. A computer's hardrive is what a computer is, and software programs can be purchased and physically installed.

Information Technology, on the other hand, covers networks and client support systems. These are applications that are written for particular clients. Not everyone needs to be on a network, so IT lessons have a more business, rather than personal focus.

Information Technology majors at La Salle may find it helpful to double major or minor in Communication, Management, or Digital Arts and Multimedia Design as these concentrations can support a particular interest for the student's or help narrow a job focus. Careers can include Network Administration and Database Management.

ISBT

Leading the Way

Among the various majors at La Salle, and many academic institutions throughout our region, Integrated Science Business technology (ISBT) is the most versatile.

What distinguishes the ISBT major from the rest, is the vast array of subjects entrenched in the ISBT curriculum. It is seldom in a major that you can acquire so much information about science, business and technology. This combination of topics that has placed the increasing number of ISBT alumni and students on such a high level.

Not only is the curriculum diverse and beneficial to future careers, but the professors, students and overall atmosphere of those that make up the program, make being apart of ISBT worthwhile. It is often felt that those in the program are apart of one big family; it's rare one can joke, laugh, learn, and effectively take care of business with teachers and advisors, as well as fellow classmates.

Overall, ISBT is great! One day this major will rule the universe.

Mathematics

Investigating Concepts

Impossible stands for "I'm possible". It might be difficult to count numbers and draw three dimensional pictures, but it's an interesting mechanism of concepts that we face each day. That's what mathematics stands for. Math is the subject of logic and perpetual research. It's hard to believe, but mathematics is one educational course that everyone lives by. For instance, it's logic that to call the elevator, one needs to press the button. Mathematics is not only numbers. Numbers constitute about 40 percent of mathematical problem solving. Mathematics is the quest of logic and reason upon evidence. Because nature itself has ground rules, mathematics has ground theories that need to be followed. La Salle gives the opportunity for students not only to follows rules but to understand the concepts with the help of wonderful and outstanding teachers. The university provides students with a well loaded math library and a math tutoring center for students in need. The goal is not for the students to memorize but to grasp the concept and to picture the relationship existing between us and the objects that we use. A typical job for a math major after graduation is an Actuary, working with banks, credit cards, and insurance companies in order to predict and maintain financial actions. Mathematics is more than just numbers. Come and explore the mystery behind it.

Philosophy

Searching for Wisdom

Gaining wisdom, the pursuit of knowledge, and the sharpening of ones mental acuity: majoring in philosophy at La Salle can facilitate all of these things. However, Philosophy is often caricatured as impractical and unrealistic. Ultimately this point of view is contravened by the actual experience that one gets as a philosophy major at La Salle. By being challenged to entertain the ideas of difficult thinkers like Plato, Immanuel Kant, and Richard Rorty, students stretch their abilities and empower themselves to be thinkers.

When the issues that philosophy majors consider cross into the ethical, as is often the case, students of philosophy are also challenged to be active and conscientious citizens that strive for the greater good. Thus it is that the goal of the La Salle philosophy professor is not only to impart a certain body of content to groups of students, but also to construct an environment that is conducive to the improvement of students as persons.

If improved thinking capacity and a sense of ethical responsibility are not both practical and realistic, then it would be hard to posit qualities of practicality or realism to any endeavor whatsoever.

Political Science

Building A Network

Political Science is a major that gives a broader understanding of the world around us. There are two programs within this major, Political Science and Public Administration. There are also four major subcategories that students may pick to concentrate on their upper level studies: American Government, Comparative Government, International Relations, and Political Theory. Studying in this field prepares students for graduate studies, law school, careers in foreign and domestic politics, and many other options. A Public Administration major focuses on the ins and outs of government. This will require classes in economics, accounting, management, and political science. Opportunities for internships with political campaigns, State & U.S. Senate, U.S. House of Representatives, and many more, give a student networking experience to form a foundation for their future careers. There are three scholarships available for Political Science majors at La Salle, The Robert J. Courtney Scholarship, the John F. Byrne Memorial Scholarship Fund, and the James A. Finnegan Public Service Fellowship. There are also several student organizations that represent Political Science on campus such as the Students' Political Association and Student Government Association. Political Science is a major that makes the world a smaller and more accessible place to live in and produces future leaders of our world.

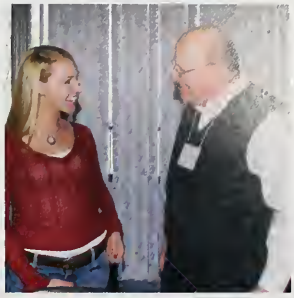
Psychology

Consent for Participation



This investigation will be undertaken here at La Salle University under the direction of the Psychology Department faculty. The purpose of this investigation is to engage in the study of human interaction and how individuals think and behave. It is a four-year long investigation that requires individuals to study various areas of the field.

Participants will be asked to work hard and learn how to apply their knowledge of human behavior. In addition, they will have to study statistics and research methodology in order to understand how to perform research in the field. Homework and examinations will be given, in addition to papers, written in APA style. Upon successful completion, students will graduate with a bachelors degree.

The only discomfort that is anticipated from participation is possibly pushing oneself to the limit academically. Despite this, the benefits of understanding the intricate working of the human mind are rewarding. This understanding will prepare participants for careers in business, education, healthcare, social services, and more. More importantly, participants will also gain greater understanding and new perspectives of the world.

By consenting to enter to this major, participants must be ready to learn about some of the most complex mysteries of the world: human interaction and behavior.

Public Administration

Managerial Approach

The Public Administration major is offered through the Political Science department. The two programs are obviously similar, in that they both study government and politics. Public Administration, however, is more about the management, or administration, of government. Therefore, majors must also take two courses in Economics (Micro and Macro-economics) and two courses in accounting.

Students studying Public Administration will be exposed to many politicial theories and concepts. They will learn about the practical make up of governments, leadership styles, how to correctly assess programs, budgeting, civil service, and public policy making. They will also receive a firm education in how the U.S. government is built and operates, as well as learning about international governments and relations. The quality education a student receives in a La Salle classroom will provide not only a better understanding of the world around us, but can lead many opportunities after graduation.

A Leadership and Global Understanding minor is a dynamic compliment to the Public Administration major, especially for those students wishing to explore international possibilities. There are also many student organizations on campus where leadership opportunities create further experiences.

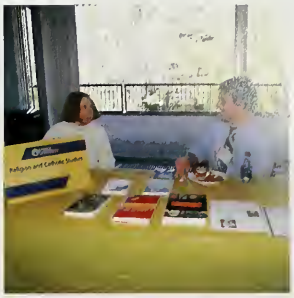
Travels to Greece



Over Spring Break, 16 students and Br. Joe Dougherty traveled to Greece with Dr. Jacqueline Pastis as part of her "The World of the Early Christians" class. The trip was designed to help students get a better understanding of the social history and the lives of early Christians in Greece.

The group started in the northern city of Thessaloniki, which is generally referred to as the 2nd largest city in Greece. During the three-day stay, they took a panoramic tour of the city with stops at the famous White Tower, Saint Dimitri's Church, St. Sophia, and the Rotunda. They also took a full-day excursion to Kavala (where Paul, Silas, Luke, and Timothy first set foot in Europe from Troy) and the ancient city of Philippi. Along the way, they enjoyed traditional Greek meals at some delicious restaurants.

After stopping for one night in the small town of Kalambaka to tour its mystical monasteries nestled high atop huge sandstone rock formations, the class continued to Athens. While there, they took a full-day tour of Ancient Corinth, the Corinth Canal, Cenchrea, Mycenae, and Acrocorinth. Athens was toured to see such sites as the House of Parliament, the Temple of Zeus, and the Panathenaic Stadium, site of the first Olympic Games. They also visited the Acropolis, home of the famous Parthenon. On the last day of the trip the class took a ferry to the Greek island of Aegina and enjoyed touring the island.

Social Work

Planning to Help

The Social Work program at La Salle allows students to work in a field where they can truly help others. A large part of the job for social work majors involves aiding those people in the community suffering from desperate living situations, including poverty, homelessness and abuse.

Since its inception in 1982, professors within the Social Work program have taught and inspired students, both in and out of the classroom. Working closely with the city of Philadelphia, students are able to receive hands-on training in the field. Students learn the techniques in the classroom that they then use in the field.

The Social Work program receives accreditation by the Social Work Council. Last year and into the Fall 2007 semester, the Social Work program celebrated this accreditation with events at Homecoming and on campus.

Many professors within the program have held jobs within the Social Work field, giving students a unique perspective about their future jobs. Professors also act as mentors, guiding students through a tough and sometimes emotional field of study.

Along with all of this, each year the Social Work program offers an award to a student who not only excels at the study, but is a single parent as well.

Sociology

Mapping a Double Major

Through studies, Psychology majors attempt to understand, evaluate, and enhance the individual. However, in order to study a human being as a whole, it is extremely essential to also consider the influence of social factors. Social factors account for a great deal of who we are and how we behave because humans are a species primarily driven by the influences of families, and later by friends, media, and society. In turn, individuals determine the values that we assign to our families and friends, as well as how society functions. Astonishingly, Psychology influences Sociology and Sociology influences Psychology.

Some of the most interesting, enjoyable professors are in the Psychology and Sociology departments. Psychology courses such as Psychology Statistics with Professor Falcone, Human Sexuality with Professor Cori, and Personality with Professor Brook make Psychology undergraduate studies memorable. Sociology courses such as Gender, Crime, and Justice with Professor Sally and Research Seminar with Brother Tri make majoring in Sociology both engaging and interesting.

The fields of Psychology and Sociology are like love and marriage-you cannot have one without the other.

School of Business

The School of Business, in collaboration with the Business Honor Society, Beta Gamma Sigma, hosted an ethics forum during Charter Week. This year marked the 3rd year of the Business Forum.

Dr. Paul Brazina, Dean of the School of Business, moderated the discussion in Dan Rodden Theater on March 19. He was joined by an esteemed panel that included business leaders: John E. Caruso of Montgomery McCracken, Edward J. Fierko of EJF Associates, Mark J. Gerber of PricewaterhouseCoopers and Robert J. Truitt of Crown Cork and Seal.

The forum was a discussion of exactly what is considered "ethical" in the United States and international business world. As described by Dr. Brazina, "the lines between what is ethical and not are fuzzy." Because of this, it was considered very important for Business majors to know what ethical actions are and are not.

Each of the four panelists took about 20 minutes of the forum to explain in-depth a real ethical issue that they studied. Because of the real-world experience the panelists had, they were able to offer some key insights into each of the cases presented. Some topics that the panel touched on included anti-bribery laws in foreign countries by United States businesses and the blockage of Google by China.

Accounting

Business Excursion

Accounting is very important in the business world. It is often the job of the accountant for a company to interpret financial issues to help a company make monetary decisions. Therefore, it is important for accounting majors to understand exactly how businesses work in accordance with their financial situations.

There are fives areas of study within the accounting program at La Salle that students can focus on: cost, management, information systems, auditing, taxation and multinational relations. These areas of study help prepare accounting students for many different types of business related jobs. Accounting majors can work as business executives, bankers, financial planners, consultants, and tax planners. Accounting majors are also prepared to work in various other fields like product manufacturing, medical, non profit and even government.

Eight courses make up the requirements for accounting majors. The 200-level courses focus on general accounting, while 300-level courses focus on management of finances, with courses on taxes and auditing. Finally, the 400-level courses specialize in the different aspects of accounting.

Finance

Finding Financial Benefits

If one were to survey a number of finance students about what motivated them to choose finance as a major, the results would reveal a variety of reasons. Some students might think that the finance field is a great career path because of the diversity of jobs available across different industries. In contrast, others may say that a career in finance will allow them to easily find a job and be well compensated.

Despite the different motivations to study finance, these students will probably agree on the fact that finance at La Salle is a great career option because of the finance faculty, which is composed of professionals who are passionate about what they teach. Indeed, this faculty complements its passion for teaching with valuable experience that is continuously acquired through consulting and private practice.

The finance student also benefits from the finance department's relationships with companies that provide opportunities not only to obtain experience prior to graduation, but also competitive jobs upon graduation.

Let the teachings that we have received in our finance courses inspire us graduates of 2008 to further our education, excel in the work place, and give back to the La Salle community.

Management

Guiding Success

Management is a topic that not only affects businesses, but most aspects of life. Every idea, strategy and decision is a form of management. Supervisors use various management techniques to run their firms, just as people make various managerial decisions to function in their lives. The techniques and skills that students gain through their education in La Salle's management program benefit them throughout whichever paths they choose in their lives. From mundane decisions to enigmatic problems, management helps guide towards solutions and success.

The La Salle business school's exceptional faculty instruct numerous courses that educate and enhance management abilities. Through scenarios, audio-visual aids, case studies, and group collaboration, management classes allow their pupils to experience the information they learn. In this way, the information is not only retained longer, but accessible for use to aid in situations throughout the students' lives.

La Salle's management program breeds intelligent leaders who are capable of making a difference in the world with their knowledge and values.

Management Information Systems

Destination Analysis

Management Information Systems (MIS) focuses on designing computer systems to help people do their work better. It involves bridging the gap between technology and the people who use it by converting user requirements into cost-effective computer information systems and finding ways to make users and systems more productive.

Information systems have always been significant in the management of organizations. The use of computers has continued to evolve from machines that could calculate and produce simple reports to distributed multiprocessors with powerful individual work stations for the end-user.

Professionals entering the MIS marketplace require specialized training and education. Unique skill sets are necessary to support a large number of job titles and positions, such as systems, business & data analysts, database administrator, e-Commerce applications analyst, computer systems auditor, information systems manager, computer and software marketing manager, office automation specialist, computer consultant, network administrator, and off-shore contract manager.

Although many low-level computer programming jobs are off-shored these days, career opportunities for higher-level MIS professionals are expanding rapidly and will continue to do so in the foreseeable future.

Marketing

Targeting the Plan

Frequently, majors are combined to give students even more skills to tackle the job force. A major that is often combined with other areas of study is marketing, partly because of its versatility. Communication is a great major to combine with marketing, as well as any of the other majors in the School of Business.

While advertising is extremely important in the marketing world, marketing courses at La Salle also focus on obtaining new customers, but at the same time, retaining previous customers.

Beginning in the marketing field of study, students learn the basic concepts of marketing: what products will be offered? Which group of customers will be targeted? How will the products be promoted to the specific customer group? By answering these questions, students learn the best way to market products and services.

In marketing classes, professors teach students how to create presentations and advertising to reach a consumer group, analyze the behaviors of targeted consumers and observe consumers to gather research, making marketing effective. Classes also focus on teaching realistic problems so students can come up with solutions, giving them an idea of what occurs in the marketing world.

School of Nursing and Health Sciences

Many nursing classes, until this year, were held in Holroyd Hall. However, with the implementation of the science building renovation underway, the School of Nursing and Health Sciences was in need of a new home.

During the Fall 2007 semester and then over winter break, Nursing classrooms, equipment and professors were moved to the St. Benilde Tower. The St. Benilde Tower previously housed Germantown Hospital which was purchased by the University in May of 2007. After the purchase, it was decided by members of the Administration in collaboration with the Nursing program that the former hospital was the perfect place to move the Nursing program.

Preparations for the Nursing program's new home were completed just in time for the 2008 Spring semester. Before Nursing students could begin classes however, the St. Benilde Tower was blessed on January 11, 2007. Dr. Zane Wolf promised all at the blessing the School would honor the new space given to the growing Nursing program "with hard work and great teaching". And so, with the "SimMan" comfortably resting in a new bed, classes were ready to begin in the newly blessed St. Benilde Tower.

Nursing

Reaching Out

With the need for medical care growing in the United States, it is easy to see why the Nursing program is one of the biggest areas of study at La Salle. Noticeable on campus by their uniforms and various type of medical equipment strung over their arms, nursing majors are always present on campus.

All of the professors within the nursing program hold degrees in nursing and actually have experience in the challenging, but rewarding field. Bringing this degree of experiences allows the professors to guide the future nurses into the correct area of nursing, whether it be pediatrics, geriatrics or even emergency.

The curriculum for nursing students is tough, involving a variety of science classes like anatomy, physics and biology, as well as clinical work outside the classroom. Students get experience from the clinical work they do at the various medical practices around La Salle.

This year was a big year for the nursing program. It now resides in St. Benilde Tower, the former Germantown Hospital. Dean of the School of Nursing and Health Sciences and professor in the nursing program, Dr. Zane Wolf was also named a Caring Scholar by the Christine E. Lynn College of Nursing for her research within clinical studies.

Nutrition

A Delicious Itinerary

When you hear the words nutritionist or dietician, what comes to mind? For most, it's probably a person who tells someone what to eat. That is part of the answer, but it isn't that simple. The field of nutrition isn't just about the foods you need to eat to stay healthy or to gain or lose weight. Nutrition is more about the different components of the food and how they work together in the body. It is important to understand the science that supports it, like anatomy and and physiology, organic chemistry and biochemistry, and microbiology. A dietician also needs to understand the differences in nutrition needs for each age group in order to support growth or maintenance. At La Salle, we offer two different programs for nutrition. One is a bachelors in Nutrition and the second is a Nutrition degree through the Coordinated Program. The Coordinated Program enables students to take internships throughout the summer and their entire senior year. Internships are given in food service, clinics and hospitals. Taking the internships while in school saves these students from having to take them after graduation. If a student is in the Coordinated Program, s/he can graduate and take the Registered Dietician exam right away. Without the Coordinated Program, students would have to find their own internships after they graduate before they can become a registered dietician.

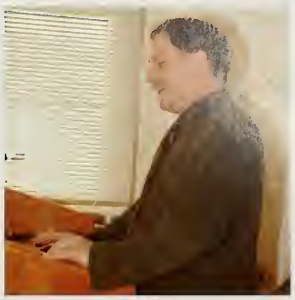
Speech-Language-Hearing Science

Grounded in Knowledge



The Speech-Language-Hearing Science Program prepares students for careers as Speech-language pathologists. A speech-language pathologist works with people who have stuttering problems, voice disorders, or have problems producing speech sounds. They also work with people who have swallowing difficulties.

La Salle offers a four year program for those students aiming to get only a bachelors degree. However, it is the Masters degree that is required for certification and licensing. La Salle offers a five year accelerated program to complete the Masters degree. Students with a Bachelors degree from another school can also come to La Salle to complete their Masters.

Led by a dedicated faculty, the Speech-Language-Hearing Science Program offers an intimate environment for students to learn, work, practice and excel in. Professors are always available to aid students and pass on their own knowledge of working within the speech-language pathology field. Small class sizes make it easy for teachers and students to develop close bonds.

The Speech-Language-Hearing Science Program is located in Wister Hall. A computer lab exists there, solely for SLH students to work. However, classes are also held at hospitals and schools for students to get hands on practice.

A student's journey through La Salle is more than just heading to 8:00 AM classes, term papers and used books. It is the life outside of classes- events, activities and organizations- that truly sets La Salle students apart from other college students.

The Student Life section describes the various activities and events that occur daily on La Salle's campus. One can always find something to do on campus, from free period events to weekends with Late Night La Salle.

Perhaps the best aspect of Student Life is the fact that students are the driving forces behind all the events and activities; they prepare and sponsor them. It is truly "Student Life", designed by students for students.

Student Life

Family Weekend

Philadelphia Flair for Families

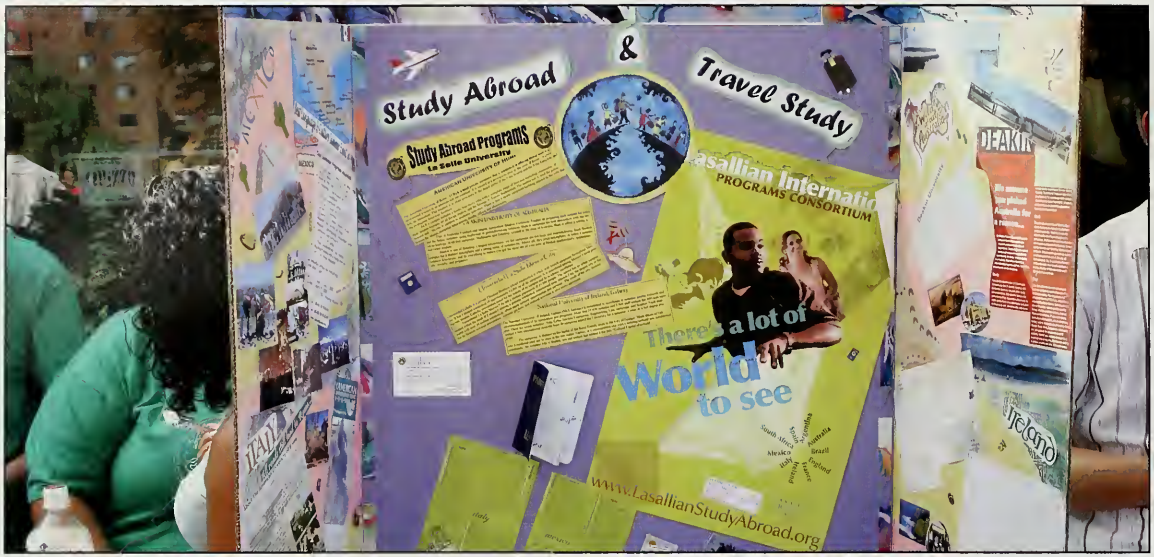
Families of La Salle students were invited to campus during the weekend of October 5-7 to take part in on and off campus activities while spending quality time with their students. The annual event radiated with a Philadelphia theme, with many activities taking place in Center City Philadelphia.

Families had the opportunity to check out many of the buildings on campus where students go every day, as well as participate in activities that are offered each weekend. They were treated to dinner in Treetops Cafe, athletic events on the new fields, and a special Family Weekend Liturgy in the chapel. There was also the Honors Convocation in the Tom Gola Arena. Other highlights were Late Night La Salle sponsored events, such as Family Feud, the Philadelphia based movie "Invincible", and a magic/hypnosis show by Kevin Hurley entertained families. Improv 101 also held their annual comedy performance.

"In coming years, my family will definitely come out."
- Chris Meyer, '11

Off campus trips into Philadelphia were big hits with students and families alike. Weekend participants could go to the Philadelphia Zoo, see the Lights of Liberty and take a shopping trip.

Freshman Chris Meyer's favorite activity was the Ghost Tour. He, along with his parents and older sister, walked throughout Old City and were shown many historical places where ghosts have been sighted. Of particular interest was a library where Ben Franklin is thought to haunt. Chris also enjoyed having his parents attend his hockey game which, since they live in Red Bank, NJ, they usually don't get to come and see. "In coming years, my family will definitely come out", said Meyer.



World Cultures Fair

Sharing Cultural Experiences

Imagine an event that brings groups of people from different backgrounds together to share ethnic foods, cultural performances and world music. Well thats what happened on October 4, 2007, when the World Cultures Fair celebrated their 7th annual event featuring various multicultural organizations, programs, service trips, and performance groups.

The fair was started with the goal of providing the La Salle community the opportunity to showcase the diversity on campus through an event that is fun, friendly and full of cultural experiences. Each year the fair has grown in size with more organizations participating and new attractions to feature.

This year the Cross Cultural Association (CCA) hosted the event in hopes of promoting acceptance and diversity throughout campus. The collaborative efforts of all those involved helped make this year bigger and more entertaining. The event featured a delicious array of ethnic foods ranging from Indian, Korean, Mexican to Italian and so much more. Performances by the Step Team, Neo African Drums n Dance, and L.A.T.I.N.S. as well as henna designs by DESI (Indian and Pakistani student organization) added to the festivities. Chestnut Hill sponsors generously gave gift certificates and baskets that were raffled off to all those who attended. Special thanks go out to the Programming Center and the Multicultural and International Center for all their efforts and support.

> "The collaborative efforts of all those involved helped make this year bigger and more entertaining".

On behalf of the CCA, we hope that you join us next fall for this special time!

HOMECOMING

Homecoming

A Celebration of La Salle

Homecoming Weekend 2007 turned out to be a wet and somewhat soggy affair. Yet, even the rain could not contain the excitement felt all around campus, as alumni returned to La Salle and students eagerly awaited the football game and the crowning of the Homecoming King and Queen.

Before the game, there was plenty to do around campus. Alumni participated in reunions, Oktoberfest, a post game party and Putting on the Greens, as well as the 25th Anniversary celebration of La Salle's Social Work Program. RSA sponsored Carnifall in the Ballroom for students to enjoy.

The football game versus Assumption College kicked off at 3:00 PM, with rain falling. However, by halftime, the rain had tapered off, allowing for the crowning of the Homecoming King and Queen to take place on the field.

> "It is definitely an honor, but I know that there are lots of other senior girls who deserve it!"
> -Martha Kutteh, '08
> Homecoming Queen

Jordan Feld was awarded King. "I was very surprised when I won. It was an honor just to be nominated", said Feld. Feld, is Vice President of La Salle Ambassadors, as well as a member of SGA, the New Explorers Program, Project Appalachia and Neighbor to Neighbor.

Martha Kutteh was announced Queen. Kutteh, a long time service volunteer said "It is definitely an honor, but I know that there are lots of other senior girls who deserve it!" Like Feld, Kutteh is also deeply involved in the University Community. AIDS Outreach, Los Ninos, Homeless Outreach, TEAM Lasallians and Foster Care Tutoring are just a few organizations that Kutteh volunteers time to.

Multicultural Education

Fifteen Years of Diversity Initiatives

Campus Diversity Initiatives began with the start of the Academic Discovery Program in 1975. Since then, La Salle has been able to promote diversity on campus with the addition of more programs such as Study Abroad and the Minority Achievement Program in 1991. To celebrate 15 years of cultural awareness, La Salle decided to honor its achievements in 2007 with a tribute to these programs and many others. The success of cultural awareness is due to La Salle's ability to adapt to its changing students with the help of the Multicultural and International Center, academic departments, and the Division of Student Affairs.

The success of cultural awareness is due to La Salle's ability to adapt to its changing students.

On the evening of October 5, La Salle celebrated its 15th anniversary of promoting cultural awareness with a tribute that included traditional food and music from around the world. What most impressed Betsy Wilson, Administrative Assistant of the Multicultural and International Center, about the evening was the large variety of the attendees present at the event. "That was the strength of the whole idea," said Wilson.

The celebration highlighted the success of La Salle in achieving the diversity present today. Cherylyn Rush, Multicultural Coordinator of the Multicultural center, said that "the event was able to demonstrate not only the different cultural organizations on campus, but also in the education field." The academic departments collaborate to include courses that give students the opportunity to learn about different cultures.

As La Salle continues to grow and expand, more opportunities for diversity will grow as well.

Volley
FOR THE CURE

Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Raising Money for a Good Cause

October was Breast Cancer Awareness month and it came with a fury to La Salle this year. Several student organizations raised money and awareness for the cause.

Alpha Sigma Tau sorority has raised hundreds of dollars for the Susan G. Komen Foundation over the past 3 years and this year was no different. The organization sold pink t-shirts within the group to raise money.

Alpha Theta Alpha sorority held a Wiffle Ball Tournament. The proceeds from the tournament and donations collected added up to $1,365. The money was brought to the American Cancer Society's Making Strides Against Breast Cancer Walk. Thirty-nine sisters of ATA walked on Sunday, October 14.

The Explorer Yearbook also raised money for and participated in the Strides Walk. The idea came from sophomore Alyssa O'Bomsawin. "I walked in high school once and I really enjoyed it so I thought it would be a good time and great cause", said O'Bomsawin. She, along with other Explorer members raised $300.

"I thought it would be a good time and great cause",
-Alyssa O'Bomsawin, '10
Explorer Yearbook

It wasn't just student organizations that helped this great cause. On November 9, the Volleyball team held "Dig for the Cure", where the ladies raised money before their game based on the number of digs the team made. "We got pledges before the match, asking for money either in flat donations or in a certain amount per dig," said team member Erin Sullivan. Altogether, the team made 50 digs, raising $496.30 for the Susan G. Komen Foundation.

The hard work of all these students on behalf of breast cancer awareness is just one example of Lasallian dedication.

Service Trips Auction

Fund Raising to Help Others

It can be hard for each service trip group at La Salle to individually raise the money needed for them to travel. However, a combined effort supported by all allows members of the La Salle community to have a great night of bartering and good food, while the service trip groups raise money to help others in need.

The Auction allows members of the La Salle community to have a great night of bartering and good food, while the service trip groups raise money to help others in need.

In total, all the service trip groups, Project Mapendo, Project Appalachia, Los Niños and Habitat for Humanity, need about $90,000 to travel. While they work hard all year on various fund raisers one of the biggest sources of funding is the Service Trips Auction, which generates about $20,000. This year marks the 5th annual event that keeps getting more popular.

The night hosts both a silent and live auction, and for the first time this year, there was basket bidding. In years past, basket bidding was a separate fund raiser taking place at the Charter Dinner. This year, bids on a showcase of baskets were taken at the Auction, then joined more baskets at the Charter Dinner.

For some, the most exciting part of the evening was the live auction, where paddles do the speaking amongst cheering and yelling. Some of the items for bidding included: the popular Guitar Hero III game, a dining room set, a pair of Southwest Airline tickets to anywhere in the continental U.S., two shore houses, dinner at the B8 townhouse and dinner with Bro. Edward Sheehy. There were a few battles by students during the night for various items, like the shore houses and Bro. Ed. However, in the end, everyone left happy and the night was a success due to the hard work of all La Salle's Service trips groups.

Charlie Awards

A Night of Student Directors

What began as a class project in 1973 out of the Communication department, has now become an annual award ceremony at La Salle, known as the "Charlie Awards." Every year, students are awarded for creating original films and acting as directors for the films.

However, this year called for full campus awareness of Charlie Awards, as the Young Broadcasters and the Film Society changed the tradition. The award ceremony and film showing took place in Dan Rodden Theatre, instead of a more private setting. This allowed the entire campus to enjoy. Celebrated in the Dan Rodden Theatre, students and staff were able to support the young producers as they proudly shared their films with the audience.

The 2008 Charlie Awards took place on the evening of February 24. Nothing was more amazing that evening than to witness the incredible films created by talented La Salle students. "I never knew we had this much talent on campus. I could totally see these films on mainstream," said junior Digital Art major, Frederick Kinglee III.

Nothing was more amazing that evening than to witness the incredible films created by talented La Salle students.

The entire evening was spectacular and never dull, as each unique film brought a different energy to the audience. Winners of the night were directors Matt Szczerbienski and Emily Brennan. Both winners were awarded $150 for their hard work and dedication by Brother Gerry Molyneaux of the Communication Department.

Drunk Driving Awareness Week

"Remembering Those Lost"

Members of the La Salle community put together a terrific program, Drunk Driving Awareness Week to educate students about effects of drunk driving and its harms.

Originally, the idea came from the Greek community, hoping to sponsor a "Run for Willie" fundraiser. Wilson "Willie" Maldonado was involved in a collision that killed him and another person, Dante Barnes, due to drunk driving on the part of Willie. The fundraiser sponsored by greek organizations would raise money for Willie's younger brother to attend private school. The event was canceled by the school after students, Mothers Against Drunk Driving and Tamia Robinson (mother of Barnes' son) showed outrage over the event.

Members of the Greek Community, especially Delta Phi Epsilon and Phi Gamma Delta, worked hard with University groups including, Peer Educators, the Division of Student Affairs and the Alcohol and Other Drugs Center, to create programs for Drunk Driving Awareness Week. These programs educated students about the harms of drunk driving, as well as commemorated the lives of the two men lost.

Overall, students and staff were pleased with the way the week turned out, offering closure and hope to all present.

Students previously upset by the "Run for Willie" applauded the new program.

During the week, students created panels for a mural showing the personal effects of drunk driving on their own lives. A vigil also took place on the night of April 17 followed by a silent walk around the campus. Perhaps most inspiring that night was the speech given by Tamia Robinson. Overall, students and staff were pleased with the way the week turned out, offering closure and hope to all present.

With over 100 organizations on campus, students keep themselves busy by participating in various organizations.

Because of the high number of organizations present, La Salle can truly say that "there is something for everyone." Academic organizations, like the, expand upon learning outside classrooms, while student government organizations like, SGA and RSA, help lead and keep the campus running smoothly. Performing arts organizations. like the Masque offer entertainment, while media organizations, like the Collegian, give the campus the news. Let's not forget community service groups,that help and support those suffering, or Greek Life that creates bonds lasting well after our journey at La Salle ends.

Student Organizations

Discovering Student Organizations at La Salle

Amid the 100 student organizations on campus, it is easy to see one reason why La Salle has its diversified reputation. Each and every organization is unique, offering different services to the university community.

The student organizations at La Salle offer ways to meet others who have similar interests and goals. However, these same organizations also outreach to the entire La Salle community in various ways. Some organizations volunteer to help others in need, while other organizations sponsor events on campus to help keep students busy on nights and weekends. Still others showcase their talents and perform for the campus. All of La Salle's organizations are grouped into several categories. On the following pages, these categories are organized by color.

A very important part of the La Salle community is our Athletic teams. Whatever the sport- field hockey, track, cross country- La Salle athletes make their presence known within the community, on and off the field. We take pride in all our sports teams.

Within these next few pages, there is a record of all La Salle teams and their accomplishments, such as how La Salle athletes go the distance in their volunteer activities, as well as historical events like the loss of the football program.

Athletics are an important part of many students' journeys through La Salle, helping students excel and define who they are.

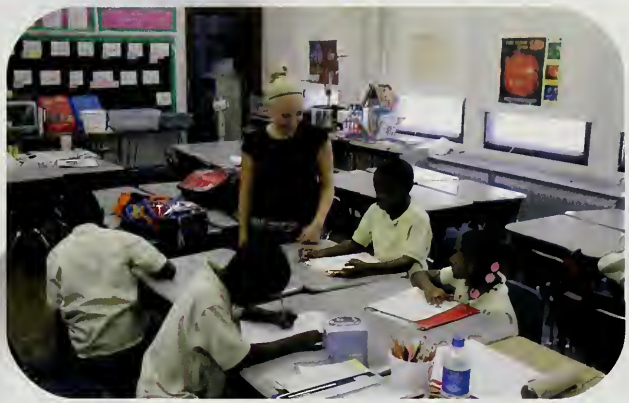
Athletes Volunteer

Women's Basketball has taken part in numerous community service programs, including the Big 5 Clinic. The Big 5 Clinic is a program set up to instruct 1st to 8th graders in basketball basics. The fundraiser's proceeds will benefit Coaches vs. Cancer. Along with the Big 5 Clinic, the Explorers are involved in the Big 5 Clean-up, and have held numerous clinics at local elementary schools.

The Football team volunteered in Oak Lane and assisted by planting trees throughout local parks. The Explorers joined other Big 5 schools and aided in the clean-up of these parks as well.

The Volleyball team hosted "Dig for the Cure" on November 9. The women raised money for the Susan G. Komen Foundation based on the number of digs they had against Fordham. They had 50 digs.

Women's Lacrosse offered some pointers to neighborhood girls. The Lacrosse team regularly held clinics and workshops allowing kids to improve their skills and awareness for the game. The clinics also presented chances for the kids to relax and enjoy a constructive activity.



Project TeamWork is an outreach program supported by the La Salle University's Division of Intercollegiate Athletics. The program uses La Salle student-athletes and coaches as mentors and role models for the Philadelphia youth who need some extra guidance and support. There are strict conditions and standards that the athletes and coaches must meet in order to participate in the program. The most important standard is that the athletes or coaches are interested in and concerned with helping children in the community.

Project TeamWork supports numerous community-based programs and organizations throughout the Philadelphia area, including Big Brothers and Sisters Association, Catholic Youth Organization, Boy and Girl Scouts of Pennsylvania, and many more. La Salle athletes focus on being positive and encouraging role models or big sisters and big brothers.

TeamWork activities include tutoring, campus visitations, and clinics and workshops. Also, the athletic department offers an incentive program to the local children. The incentive program rewards positive behavior and the achievement of personal goals with prizes like free tickets to La Salle athletic events. Student-athletes volunteer their personal time to tutor neighborhood kids in correspondence with the Mentor Program. Campus visitations are scheduled to bring community kids to the university's campus and show them that a good education is an attainable goal. Numerous athletic teams sponsor and participate in clinics that teach specific techniques and principles that pertain to their sport. Project TeamWork offers various activities that benefit the community's youth.

Project TeamWork is made possible by the support of sponsors. TeamWork sponsors donate resources or make contributions to enhance the program. Sponsors, in return, get the personal satisfaction of enhancing the community's life, campus and community recognition, and admission to La Salle sports events.

Project TeamWork is a growing program that promotes positive educational experiences, and presents opportunities of constructive interaction for Philadelphia's youth.

History Repeats Itself

The La Salle football program was reinstated in 1997 after being dropped 56 years prior due to WWII. In 1999, the Explorers joined the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference (MAAC) along with 9 other similar schools. La Salle's non-scholarship program was comprised of dedicated student- athletes. In the fall of 2007, history repeated itself as the program was discontinued again.

The decision to discontinue the program was made because in 8 years, the MAAC lost 6 of the 10 performing teams; Georgetown decided to change conferences, while Fairfield, Siena, St. John's, Canisius, and St. Peter's dropped their football programs entirely. Then in spring of 2007, Duquesne announced plans to change conferences. So, with the deterioration of the MAAC league, Iona, Marist, and La Salle had to make a decision. Iona elected to become a Division I FCS Independent team for the 2008 season, and Marist decided to join the Pioneer Football League starting in 2009.

Different options were considered here at La Salle: changing conferences, moving to scholarship football, becoming an independent team, or discontinuing the program altogether. After, extensive research and contemplation, discontinuing the team was decided to be the best choice for the university.

Rumors about the reason behind the decision circulated, and La Salle administration firmly stated the decision was not a result of the team's success, or lack thereof. Throughout the program's 10 years, the team had an overall record of 35-76 with winning seasons being few and far between.

According to a press release from the Athletic Department, Dr. Thomas Brennan, Director of Athletics stated "It is important to note that this decision was not the result of the performance of our team, nor is it a reflection on the team and the young men who have competed for La Salle. We admire the dedication and manner with which our football players represented La Salle University. We are proud of the hard work these student athletes have exhibited on the field, in the classroom, and in the community. Their passion and dedication to La Salle football only makes this announcement that much more difficult to make."

The decision affected the junior players the most. With only a year left of school and no football, it would be absurd to transfer to another program. Although many would love to pursue the sport that they have played for so long, the academic situation seems to hinder their athletic careers.

Even though the decision was widely discussed on campus, one thing is certain, everyone is impacted: students, faculty, coaches, administration, parents, alumni, and most of all, the student-athletes.

Will the university replace the football team with another team? And if so, which team will it be? These questions linger throughout the La Salle community. Although the circumstances are tough, everyone wishes all those impacted by the decision the best of luck in the future.

Field Hockey

The La Salle field hockey team started the year off with a 4-3 record but ended at 8-12. Kara Harpel led the team with numerous game-changing plays and scores. Maria Allegretto added to Harpel's scores and assisted in the success of the team. Freshman Beth Carey was a major part of the Explorers' success this season. Carey was a La Salle Student-Athlete of the week, and a three time Atlantic 10 Rookie of the week. Most of all, senior goalie Ellen Axelsen had an awesome season with a game high of 12 saves and four shutouts.

Men's Soccer

Men's Soccer had a 6-11 season, with many overtime games, some heartbreaking losses and some triumphant victories. The team just missed a post season playoff run when they lost the final game of the season to George Washington University, 1-2. When the season ended, three players made Atlantic 10 mention: Jeremy Oritz (All-Conference Honorable Mention Team), Ryan Ritcher (All Rookie Team) and Walter McMahon (Academic All Conference Team). Co-captain, McMahon was well-known for working hard in his studies and with his soccer skills. In his four years at La Salle, McMahon played in over 60 games. Seniors like McMahon were true leaders on the soccer team and their leadership will truly be missed. Good luck to seniors Devin Ladd, Walter McMahon, Jeremy Ortiz, Geoff Schaeffer, Joe Harvey and Mike Lehr, as they leave La Salle .

Football

La Salle Football is more than meets the eye. At La Salle, there was a group of young men who were undersized and overlooked coming out of high school. These traits did not keep them from pursuing their goal, which was to play college football at a high level of competition. Despite an overall record of 0-10, the Explorers had a great passion for the game. There might not have been the most talent on the field every week, but one would never know that by the way they came out and played each game. From the first blow of the whistle to the last, they came to play and they played hard. No matter the outcome of the game, they left it all out on the field week in and week out. They were a unit, a very strong unit that dealt with and overcame adversity all throughout the season. When most people would have given up or quit, they worked harder. In each game, there was a lesson to be learned. The most important things in life are honesty, integrity, hard work, family, and faith; never forgetting who we are and where we came from.

Men's Cross Country

The Men's Cross Country team competed in an extraordinary season. Fighting through rain and mud, the men persevered to reclaim their A-10 Championship title. At the Atlantic-10 Championship, senior Dave Alfano placed second, sophomore Trevon Rainford fourth and junior Korey Edwards sprinted to fifth. Not only did the men again take the A-10 Championship, but Coach Charles Torpey won Men's and Women's Cross Country Coach of the Year honors for the 13th time in his career. The team was led by top performing seniors: David Alfano, Bill Ceriello, Joe Fedorowicz, Matt Lawson, Kyle Luke, Tom Ranalli, Yeremiah Shemuale and Michael Stanziano. All of these men leave La Salle with incredible performances in their histories, and they leave big leadership roles on the team to be filled for next year.

Women's Cross Country

For the past 3 seasons, Women's Cross Country has dominated the Atlantic 10 Conference, ending the seasons with the Atlantic 10 championship title. This year was no diferent, as the Women's Cross Country team ran their way into another Atlantic 10 Championship. And the team showed why they deserved the title, competing in rain and muddy conditions at some of their meets. Not only was the team as a whole extraordinary this season, but several women won awards and accolades. For example, seniors Rachel Papin and Carolyn Lipovsky were named to the Philadelphia Inquirer's 'Academic All-Star Team', not only for their terrific ability in races, but their oustanding academic achievements as well. Leaving the Cross Country team this year are seniors: Adriana Boyle, Meagan Green, Rachel Hensey, Carolyn Lipovsky, Elisabeth Mayer and Rachel Papin.

Men's Swimming and Diving

Men's Swimming and Diving had a terrific season, competing in the Atlantic 10 Championship and taking second place in the Rhode Island Invitational. Seniors John Welsh and Grant Chin led the team to a spectacular victory over Duquesne in their final home meet at La Salle. That same meet was Senior Day. Combined, Welsh and Chin brought three first place finishes to the team, allowing La Salle to triumph over their A-10 rival. The team's final meet of the season at Drexel was also a win. At the Atlantic 10 Championship, the team finished in seventh place. Seniors John Welsh and Grant Chin will be missed as they graduate this year. However, with inspiring underclassmen ready to lead the team, Men's Swimming and Diving looks to have an impressive season next year.

Meanwhile, swimming quartet Jessica Carbin, Shannon Duval, Carrie Houck and Carleen Caldwell set a school record at the Atlantic 10 Championship as well. At the Rhode Island Invitational, the team took third place, and at the Atlantic 10 Championship, the team took seventh overall. Seniors Catherine Gifford, Melanie Charles and Jaclyn Kubala graduated after the season, leaving big leadership roles to fill for the underclassmen.

Men's Basketball

In a preseason poll, Atlantic-10 coaches and media picked the Explorers to finish in 13th place. Little did they know, the team would make it to the quarterfinals of the A-10 Championship. Notable victories included UPenn, St. Joe's, and Dayton. The win over St. Joe's was the first over their Philadelphia Big 5 rival in seven years.

There were many individual achievements as well. Senior Darnell Harris became the La Salle, A-10, and Big 5 three-point king and won the NCAA three-point shooting contest. Harris and sophomore Rodney Green were named All Philadelphia Big 5. Freshman Jerrell Williams was selected to the A-10 All-Rookie Team. Sophomore Yves Mekongo Mbala was selected to the A-10 Academic All-Conference Team.

Women's Basketball

During the 2007-08 season, the Women's Basketball team experienced 12 wins as the team was led by head coach Tom Lochner. The Explorers started off their season with a 34-point win during their exhibition game against the MI Express. Many members were honored this year for their achievements, including junior Margaret Elderton, who was named to the Big 5's Second Team, and senior Melanie Gibbons was a honored as an All-American Team member. Carlene Hightower received an honor when she was invited to attend the WNBA's Pre-Draft Camp this spring. This senior was also named Philadelphia's Big 5 Women's Basketball Player of Year and became the third La Salle woman to be named this titled.

Men's Tennis

La Salle's Men's Tennis team broke even this year, with an impressive 8-4 record in the fall, then a disappointing 4-7 record in the spring. The men also lost both of their A-10 Championship play opportunities, having been shut out by both Richmond and St. Joe's. Many were impressed by the strong fall team, however, and feel that 2008-2009 will be a great year. Junior Chris Butera was honored by the A-10 and named to the Academic All-Conference Team. Butera not only had a great year on the court, but off the court he maintained a 3.81 GPA.

Women's Tennis

La Salle's Women's Tennis team had an extremely disappointing season this year, winning just one match all year. The win came against Millersville, which ended their fall season. Injuries and illness plagued the team, especially at the end of the year, right before the A-10 Tournament. The Explorers went into the tournament as the 14th ranked team, and lost both of its matches. The team did have a shining star off the court, as athletics was represented by senior Martha Kutteh being honored in the fall as La Salle's Homecoming Queen, and in the spring as the recipient of the Brother Emery C. Mollenhauer Award.

Women's Lacrosse

It was a tough season for the Women's Lacrosse team. They suffered some heartbreaking losses, losing by a small margin. In the game against St. Joseph's, the Explorers rallied with a vengance, only to run out of time. Despite the challenges, the team always worked together, scoring whenever possible. Senior Emily Bonczek leaves the team with record setting accomplishments in La Salle's history. During the past 4 years, she scored 199 goals, making her the second leading scorer in La Salle's Lacrosse history. Bonczek was the only player in the Atlantic-10 conference this season to reach the 60 goal mark. Bonczek was joined by teammate Jessica Hanson on the Atlantic 10 All-Conference team. Other seniors leading the team were Ellen Axelsen, Kaylan Billingsley, Jessica Hanson, Kelly Heiss and Erika Matthews.

There, they had a victory against Creighton. Great individual performances by team members helped the Explorers get those wins. Sophomore Laura Beth McCreesh was the team's ace pitcher with a record of 11-6 and an ERA of 1.91. Freshman Ali Shepherd won All-Rookie Team honors. Sophomore Angelina Bisbiglia got A-10 All-Conference Honorable Mention. Seniors Michelle Sullivan and Kate Gulkis helped lead the team and set them on the path to victory for years to come.

Men's Rowing

Men's rowing competed in many races this year, in both fall and spring. The events that Men's Rowing raced in were the: President's Cup, Knetch Cup, Kerr's Cup, Bergen Cup, Dad Vail Regatta and Frostbite Regatta. Practicing on the Schuylkil, the team put together boats of 4 and 8 to compete in the races. At the Kerr Cup, the men's varsity 8 team took gold in its race, beating Philadelphia University by a mere 2 seconds. At the Frostbite Regatta, the men's varsity 8 team took 2nd place. Helping to row the team to victory were seniors James Keough, Matt Loftus and Joe Scibetta.

Women's Rowing

Women's rowing competed in many events this season, including the 70th Dad Vail Regatta, the Bergen Cup, the President's Cup, the Knetch Cup and the Atlantic-10 Championships. At the Knetch Cup, the Women's varsity 4 boat raced to a place in the finals. At the President's Cup, the Women's Varsity 8 competed in a thrilling race, beating Marist only by 3 seconds to win the race. At that same event, the Women's Varsity 4 took second in their race. The rowing team also had a surprise in store for them this year. For the first time in its 13 year history, the Atlantic-10 Women's Rowing Championship created an all conference team. Selected from La Salle for this honor was senior Becky Mahney.

Baseball

The baseball team had an incredible season, winning numerous high honors and some exciting games. For the first time in their Atlantic-10 history, the Explorers won a double header game with scores in the double digits. These high scoring, back-to-back victories came against George Washington. Senior John Rickards was a driving force for the Explorers, offensively leading the team with a .348 batting average. For his efforts offensively and defensively, Rickards was named to the Atlantic-10 All Conference team as well as the Big 5 Team for the third time in his La Salle career. Junior Justin Handler joined Rickards on the Big 5 Team. Meanwhile, teammate, freshman pitcher, Kevin Fuqua was named to the All-Rookie team. Fuqua had a fantastic first season, including pitching a shut out game against Cornell on March 7.

Men's Track and Field

With their first meet in the beginning of December, and their last towards the end of June (including the post season), Men's Track & Field could quite possibly have the longest season in Explorer Athletics. Of course, with such a long season, and competitions in both indoor and outdoor track and field events, there are many highlights. Early predictions gave the Men's indoor team a 3rd place finish in the A-10, which is exactly how they placed. That win was helped by the six individual 1st place finishes. The outdoor team also placed 3rd and there were many individual winners there as well. La Salle put on solid performances at the IC4A and the ECAC. Senior Sean Quigley ended the year as a 7 time All-American. Quigley was named Athlete of the Year (for the 2nd time) by the US Track & Field and Cross Country Coaches Association and senior Billy Rhea was named Athlete of the Year by the A-10.

Women's Track and Field

Competing in both indoor and outdoor track events puts the women's track and field team to the ultimate test. Team members must learn the "how tos" to compete in both atmospheres. The hard work and achievements of the team earned them a spot to compete in the A-10 Championship, as well as the ECAC Championships. Overall, the team was recognized by the NCAA for their outstanding scores in the Academic Progress Rate (APR) for the 2007-08 academic year. The APR tracks the academic progress of student athletes, and gives public recognition to those doing well. Individual team members also won honors, like Rachel Papin. Papin was named A-10 Indoor Track "Athlete of the Year", as well as "Performer of the Meet" at the A-10 Indoor Track Championship. Teammate, Carolyn Lipovsky was named A-10 "Athlete of the Week" as well.

Senior year means many things to different people. To some, it is the start of a student's journey into the job market or buying a first home. To others, it's the beginning of graduate school or some other continuation of studies.

Every aspect of La Salle is aimed at preparing students for their journey after La Salle. The classes, activities and organizations are all vital parts that make up the history of these graduating seniors. These pages mark the seniors' journeys through La Salle, as well as the end of that same journey: Graduation. However, it is important to note that this is "not the end" but only the beginning...

Commencement Speech

"What Does the Eleventh of May Mean?"

"It is a challenge we are given, a challenge renewed with every experience we take from our alma mater, our nurturing mother. The warm, comforting embrace of our mother will always be there for us in the halls of Lasallian schools worldwide, but that embrace is simultaneously a push, an urging. With every ounce of comfort, knowledge and formative experience that we have taken from La Salle, we are challenged to go out and be, whatever we chose to be. A homemaker or a doctor, a president or a bartender-whatever it is that we do with ourselves from here on out is a response to the challenge of Lasallian love. Our mother has nurtured us, our alma mater has embraced us, but to what end? This is a terrifyingly open question, but remember, we have been nurtured, formed, reached out to. It is our turn to reach out now, to the best of our abilities.

We have been changed; now we must be agents of change. We commuted, we lived in Philadelphia, Europe, Asia, in dorms, houses and apartments; we majored in everything and if you're sitting here, listening to me, you passed. We rejected intolerance when it reared its head on rare occasions; we sought to alleviate the ills of the world through programs like Project Mapendo and Books for Africa, as well as AIDS walks, benefits for flood victims, and countless other examples of reaching out into the world community. I think we can answer the challenge - I think we deserve to inherit the efficacious legacy of the Lasallian tradition...

This is the nature of commencement: it means the breakdown of distinctions. I am no more a commuter today than you are residents, international students or continuing studies students. Today, we reach - out of our parochial moments and into the lives of each other to form a community; into our respective communities, to let the downtrodden know that they are loved and cared for; and into the world at large to extend the love our community extends to all. Today, the walls are broken, and we are made one, sharing space on a football field rather than separate classrooms in separate buildings. The Eleventh of May, to a commuter, means ceasing to commute and starting to truly live La Salle at large, to become a resident of the world.

Oh, that liberal arts education..."

Honorary Degrees

Jeremy Nowak, Ph.D., is Co-Founder, President and CEO of The Reinvestment Fund (TRF), a national leader in the financing of neighborhood revitalization. TRF provides financing in support of affordable housing, small businesses, commercial real estate, and community facilities across the Mid-Atlantic region. TRF has financed 17,000 housing units, 7 million square feet of commercial real estate, 23,000 charter school seats, 35,000 jobs and 10,000 child-care openings. It's Fresh Food Financing Initiative has supported the development and expansion of 35 fresh food markets in the underserved communities of Pennsylvania, including a Fresh Grocer to La Salle's Good Shepherd property.

Jeremy Nowak, Ph.D.
Doctor of Humane Letters

Nowak is Chair of the board of Mastery Charter Schools, a network of four inner-city high schools in Philadelphia, and Chair of the board for Alex's Lemonade Stand, a charity that raises money for pediatric cancer research. He is also a member of the Board of Directors for the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

Nowak's undergraduate degree in Philosophy is from Pennsylvania State University and his Doctorate in Cultural Anthropology is from the New School for Social Research. He is a fellow at the Aspen Institute's program for entrepreneurial education leaders.

Nowak received The Philadelphia Award, the city's highest civic honor, in 1995.

Pat Ciarrochi
Doctor of Humane Letters

Pat Ciarrocchi received the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Humane Letters at the 2008 La Salle Commencement Ceremony. Ciarrocchi is a news anchor and reporter for CBS 3 in Philadelphia. She has worked for CBS 3 since 1982 and has received an Emmy award for her work for the station. Starting at CBS 3, Ciarrocchi began as the news anchor for the station's early morning news, eventually extending the half-broadcast into a two-hour broadcast.

Working in broadcast for many years, Ciarrocchi has reported some memorable events in history, including the canonization of St. Katherine Drexel, the death of Pope John Paul II and the recent visit of Pope Benedict XVI to the United States.

In her impressive career, Ciarrocchi has achieved many honors. She won the Gabriel Award from the National Catholic Association of Broadcasters. In 2000, Ciarrocchi was inducted into the Philadelphia Broadcast Pioneers Hall of Fame for her work in television.

Ciarrocchi graduated from Rosemont College with a bachelor's degree. She has received honorary doctorate degrees from Rosemont College, Cabrini College and Neumann College.

Congratulations all 2008 La Salle Graduates!

The "Ads Section" often marks the end of a yearbook, as is true in our case. In these final pages, businesses, friends and families, student organizations and University departments salute the graduating seniors, as they start the next path in their journey through life. These messages come straight from the heart, and are a creative way to say good luck, and in some cases, goodbye.

Congratulations, Class of 2008.

Volume 64 of the Explorer Yearbook was printed by Jostens Publishing Company. Phil Klein acted as the Jostens local representative to La Salle University; Dee Skelton was the plant representative. The initial preparation, cover design, and final assembly took place at the Jostens plant in State College, Pennsylvania. 820 copies of the 2008 yearbook were printed. The book is made up of 256 pages of gloss enamel paper printed in four color process and smythe sewn with head and foot bands. The cover of the 2008 yearbook is special litho with UV coating and the book has gold dust end sheets.

Carl Wolf Studio produced all of the senior portraits in the book, as well as many athletic, academic and candid photographs. The remainder of the pictures were taken by Explorer Yearbook staff, submitted by the La Salle University community, from University Communications and from the University Archives.

The "Charting the Course" theme was developed by the Explorer Yearbook staff and the layouts within the book were designed by the yearbook staff using Jostens Yeartech Online Program. The 2008 Explorer is an official publication of La Salle University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and reproduction of any portion of this book, either in part, or in its entirety, is prohibited without the written consent of the University.

Inquires about the 2008 Explorer Yearbook should be sent to La Salle University.
